I've spent the better part of this past week working on continuing to make PGE a more professional business. I now have a multi-cloud storage manager, and a brand new email account for our advertising & promotions department

At the beginning of the week, minus Christmas Day, I began working with the software developer who's software has made it possible to bring you the Billboard music charts, and various other news throughout the site in order to bring you a a more feature rich experience in addition to fixing a bug that was causing the site to disappear on certain pages.

Unfortunately over the past couple of days the Billboard music charts are no longer showing up on the site. Last night I sent out an email to Billboard asking for help & confirmation on the status of this issue.

The Billboard music charts feature was a major driving factor for PGE, as we showcased nearly 40 charts. Because of this, I will have to take a few days off from working on the PGE while I wait to hear back from the folks at Billboard if I ever do. I've spent the better part of yesterday trying to find a replacement for Billboard, and it saddens me to say that I have very few options, and none of them offer a consistent quality product. I know you all want your PGE back, and I want to get the network finished and relaunched as quickly as possible as well. So I have decided that I will give Billboard 5 business days to respond, after which I will begin the painstakingly process of removing the 35+ Billboard music chart links from each of the nearly 40 menus replacing them with a more simplified menu.

This is going to result in two things happening. The first is that this will give you the opportunity to view more charts than we were currently bringing you. The second is that that the charts will no longer be implemented into the page itself. Instead you will see a link to the chart, which will open in what's known as a lightbox. A lightbox is essentially a popup that does not open in a new window or tab, but rather inside of our site. I am truly sorry for this potentially bad news, but it is the best that I can do if Billboard has shut down their RSS feeds without pulling the feature entirely.

I will be taking December 31st, 2017 to January 8th, 2017 off while I wait for Billboard's response.

Thank you all for your understanding &
Happy New Year!

First let me thank everyone who visited us this past Sunday for our latest update announcement. I had planned on releasing this update on Sunday, but with it being Christmas Eve and all I figured it'd be better to release it today as I don't know what my schedule will be on Sunday.

This week has been extremely busy for me. Earlier this week, I discovered that our CDN was creating a technical bug with some of our content mods. While trying to figure out what was causing the problem with the content mods I downgraded & upgraded our template & module software. So I spent a couple of hours having to redo some template work. I have implemented a workaround for this, but will be contacting our CDN after the first of the new year to see if they can take a look at the situation.

I have also started moving all the software, backups, etc... from our Google Drive to a cloud storage. This was not an easy decision for me, but as I look forward to relaunching the networking, I have to get everything from our archives to backups, & everything else organized as well. Currently everything on our Google Drive is on my personal Google Drive. So in addition to moving everything to a new cloud storage provider, to get it out of my personal Google Drive, I will also be copying & moving several items to our admin & webmaster's Google Drives.

My niece has started translating parts of the menu into various languages and should be done by middle of next week.

Things are progressing slowly, but they are coming along nicely.
Merry Christmas, Happy Holidays, & Happy New Year!

Thank you for giving me a few minutes of your busy schedule to update you all on our return & grand re-opening of PGE.

Let me it clear, PGE is not closing regardless of the fact that we've been closed for almost 2 years.

I'm really very sorry for the past two years. Sometimes things happen in life that takes you away from doing what you love.

We almost re-opened earlier this year, but our network glitched & we lost about 25% of our new database. Contacting our host didn't even help as they never took the time to respond back; so we had to start all over which was literally hundreds of hours worth of work. Then things in my personal life started to unravel, and I was forced to take a short break. I started working on the network again, and again I was forced to tend to things at home. I am now very happy to say that as of last week, I'm back to work on the network, and things are starting to look good.

About 92% of our database is complete.

A cosmetic issue that has been bugging me has finally been fixed.

Our template software has been updated

Our Music Notes Rewards software has been debugged, and I've fixed a technical issue that plagued our previous alpha build

Our Donation thermometer now has 7 levels instead of 5 giving everyone a better idea of exactly how much money we've raised.

As of today, I can not give an eta on our relaunch, but please continue to monitor this page as well as our social networks.

Thank you everyone,
Danielle

I'm extremely pleased to announce that I have finally now returned to working on PGE. I unfortunately do not have an eta on when PGE will relaunch. I will be posting more information on Sunday evening.

I've had some personal issues to take care of which has forced me to temporarily halt work on PGE.

I'm working as much as I can & fingers crossed we'll be open by Halloween :)

Most of the backend of the network has been completed & should be completed by Wednesday.

Thank you for visiting. I am still rebuilding the network & hope to relaunch the site before the end of September.
